I. BACKGROUND

Good promotional practices require international rules adhered to by as many countries as possible, as well as effective ethical pharmaceutical promotion legislation enforced nationally. As a global pharmaceutical company, Sanofi adheres to the codes on promotional activities governing our industry worldwide (IFPMA), in Europe (EFPIA) and the United States (PhRMA) and Sanofi's internal codes are based on these codes and refer to them explicitly.

Below is a list of codes and principles adhered to by Sanofi:

- IFPMA Code – International Federation of Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Associations – Code of Pharmaceutical Marketing Practices
- WHO – World Health Organisation – Ethical Criteria for Medicinal Drug Promotion
- WSMI – World Self-Medication Industry Advertising of non-prescription medicines to the public
- EFPIA Code of Practices – European Federation of Pharmaceutical Industries and Associations – Code of Practice on the promotion of prescription-only medicines to, and interactions with, healthcare professionals
- PhRMA Code – Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America – Principles on Responsible sharing of truthful and non-misleading information about medicines with healthcare professionals and payers
- EU Directive – European Commission – Directive 2001/83/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 6 November 2001 on the Community code relating to medicinal products for human use

Definitions

Significant efforts have been made by the international pharmaceutical industry in order to ensure compliant and ethical communication and interaction with healthcare professionals and patients. The quality of healthcare for patients depends on scientific information of medical products made available to them. The information should thus be scientifically accurate and fair in a view to support good patient care. These information are classified as “promotional”, “non-promotional” or “scientific”.

Promotional material: all communications, materials, messages or events created, controlled, disseminated by or on behalf of the Sanofi group that mention, characterize or discuss a product approved for marketing, to induce the prescription, recommendation, supply, administration or consumption of its products. It includes all media types i.e. paper, video, radio and digital.

Non-promotional material: any material intended to be used for scientific exchange activities only, and not promoting any product. This includes information on a particular disease or product used in a non-promotional context.

Scientific information: any information on a particular disease or product.

The definition of promotion material is not fully consistent across countries. However, the objectives, context of use, format, type, and final target audience will determine if it is promotional or non-promotional. These are the criteria identified for each material considering applicable industry commitments on promotional practices, local regulations and laws within Sanofi.

Moreover, as a pharmaceutical company, Sanofi is under the obligation to provide information on its product portfolio upon the requests of patients, healthcare professionals or general public.

II. GROUP'S CODE AND POLICIES

1. Code of Ethics

Sanofi's Code of Ethics reaffirms the Group's commitment to comply with high ethical standards when promoting our products. Under the code, the Group must comply with Group rules, local regulations on the supply of promotional aids to healthcare professionals, the Sanofi pharmaceutical product promotion principles and rules, as well as international codes (in particular IFPMA and EFPIA).

For more information, see :

- Code of Ethics – Interacting with the Scientific community, Being transparent about our products (Please refer to Sanofi Code of Ethics in the Documents Center)

2. Policies

The core mission of our promotional activities is to provide quality information about the product presented in compliance with the marketing authorization for that product, and to promote correct use of the product among healthcare professionals.

Our Regulatory Affairs and Ethics & Business Integrity Departments have established procedures and directives that comply with international standards:

- on scientific information provided via promotional or non-promotional materials: best practice guidelines on the use of promotional documents or materials to communicate information about medicines and healthcare products, and on the provision of items of medical utility, etc.;
- on using websites to provide scientific and promotional information: our Internet Validation Committee has established an approval procedure covering all websites developed by Sanofi and its subsidiaries worldwide; and
- on interactions with healthcare professionals: hospitality rules associated with scientific events, and rules governing the remuneration and selection of experts with whom we contract to provide services.

To ensure that our ethical principles are applied in practice, we are also committed to:

- providing continuing professional education for sales representatives, and assessing our sales visit activities;
- applying the strictest ethical standards on scientific materials;
- providing precise, up-to-date and objective scientific information so that our employees are knowledgeable in their interactions with healthcare professionals and comply with the relevant regulatory requirements;
- supplying documentation that enables healthcare professionals to make objective assessments about the quality of our products and the uses for which they were developed;
- ensuring that information about our products is based on scientifically proven results; and
- conducting internal audits to ensure that our subsidiaries are in compliance with the approval procedures for scientific materials, and with internal and external codes of conduct and currently applicable laws and regulations governing promotion.

3. French Charter for Medical representatives

On October 15, 2014, LEEM (the French Pharmaceutical Companies Association) and CEPS (Economic Committee for Healthcare Products, a French government agency) signed a new charter governing sales representatives visits. It is designed to safeguard the quality of the information provided to healthcare professionals and to promote the proper use of medicines.

Based on this charter, the HAS (the French National Authority for Health) drafted a new certification framework which was published in the Official Journal on April 13, 2016 (last update published April 13, 2017). The certification audit involves obtaining assurance that:

- the company is capable of reliably delivering on its declared policy and objectives,
- the company's management system complies with the specified requirements and is effectively implemented, especially in the following areas: quality policy for promotional information (built into our global quality approach), ethical standards, and the training and assessment of individuals involved in sales representatives visits.

These developments provided an opportunity to enhance the expertise of our sales representatives teams and our overall operational excellence while maintaining an ethical and responsible approach, thereby ensuring that activities within the scope of the charter are fully compliant.

In February 2007, our sales representatives were among the first to be certified under the initial charter. Our certification has been renewed every year since then following an audit, the most recent of which was in April 2017.

We also provide a dedicated hotline for healthcare professionals to give feedback on the quality of medical sales visits.

4. Medico-Marketing Materials Management System

Sanofi's foremost concerns are patient safety and the proper use of our products. The promotional materials related to Sanofi products are based on scientifically proven results and undergo an internal review process to ascertain that they are objective and fair before they can be used. Our Medical and/or Regulatory Affairs teams at the global levels and in each country are responsible for reviewing materials and approving them prior to use.

In 2014, the 4M system (Medico-Marketing Materials Management System), was launched, a global solution for the review and approval of promotional and non-promotional materials. The solution standardizes the review process while providing a degree of flexibility to improve the workflows for the review and approval of promotional and non-promotional materials worldwide. In 2017, the system has been deployed worldwide: more than 140,000 pieces are reviewed a year.

5. Complaints mechanism

Sanofi has set up a complaints management procedure for the promotional and non-promotional materials and activities. This process is focused on local complaint handling and tracking according to local rules and regulations. For global brands, the procedure requires proper communication between local and global teams to ensure corporate insights and ability to take appropriate global action.
